THINGS TO KNOW

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

We've probably all taken a picture of the Boston Harbor while out and about in the city, but did you know that the picturesque waters used to be the most polluted port in the country? That was decades ago, though, and now, according to a biologist with the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute, the flounder that swim in the harbor are tumor-free. Boston Harbor flounder used to develop cancerous tumors, thanks to all the sludge and sewage they were swimming through. The flounder's better health is a sign of a healthier harbor overall, and proof that federal environmental efforts can have a big impact. Read more about how inside and at metro.boston.us.

REPUBLICAN EMAILS HACKED BEFORE ELECTION

Email accounts for a campaign group supporting Republicans candidates running for the U.S. House of Representatives were hacked before this year's congressional elections, according to a person familiar with the investigation. Hackers used National Republican Congressional Committee credentials to access a "small number" of email accounts at the organization, which is also known as the NRCC, said the person, who was not authorized to discuss details of the attack. NRCC spokesman Ian Prior confirmed the group was the victim of a cyberattack by an unknown party, but disputed that stolen passwords were used. "Upon learning of the intrusion, the NRCC immediately launched an internal investigation and notified the FBI, which is now investigating the matter," Prior said. The NRCC changed the passwords at its web-based email provider and took steps to prevent similar attacks, said the person, who did not name the email provider. The hackers used techniques that make them difficult to identify and officials have yet to determine whether they were aligned with a foreign government, said a second person familiar with the case.

JEFFERSON STARSHIP MEMBERS SETTLE LAWSUIT

A founding member of Jefferson Starship has settled his lawsuit against former bandmates over the use of the rock group's name. The accord between guitarist Craig Chaquico and defendants including David Freiberg, Donny Baldwin and others resolved a breach-of-contract lawsuit over performances and merchandising since the January 2016 death of co-founder Paul Kantner. Terms were not disclosed, but the parties "have settled this entire matter," according to a Monday filing from their lawyers in San Francisco federal court. U.S. District Judge

Vince Chhabria dismissed the case on Tuesday. "Hopefully everything has been put to rest," Julia Greer, a lawyer for the defendants, said in an interview. Known for the 1975 song "Miracles," a No. 3 hit sung by Marty Balin, Jefferson Starship formed following the breakup of Jefferson Airplane, whose 1960s hits "Somebody to Love" and "White Rabbit" featured singer Grace Slick. Kantner and Balin were also members of Jefferson Airplane. Jefferson Starship evolved in the mid-1980s into Starship, known for the No. 1 hits "We Built This City" and "Nothing's Gonna Stop Us Now."

GAMBLER WALTERS LOSES INSIDER TRADING APPEAL

A federal appeals court on Tuesday upheld the insider trading conviction and five-year prison sentence of famed Las Vegas sports gambler William "Billy" Walters, even as it chastised an FBI agent for leaking grand jury information about the case. Walters, 72, had been accused of using nonpublic information from former Dean Foods Co. Chairman Thomas Davis about the dairy processing company and from Olive Garden parent Darden Restaurants Inc. to make more than $43 million in profits and avoided losses from 2008 to 2014. The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Manhattan said Walters' April 2017 conviction was not unconstitutionally tainted by several leaks from FBI Special Agent David Chaves to reporters about the grand jury probe. It also rejected Walters' claims that prosecutors suborned perjury by Davis over the use of a disposable cellphone to provide tips, and that the evidence didn't support his conviction related to Darden. The case drew added attention because of Walters' relationships with billionaire investor Carl Icahn and champion golfer Phil Mickelson, neither of whom was criminally charged.

STORMY LAWYER AVENATTI RULES OUT RUN FOR PREZ

Attorney Michael Avenatti, who represents adult-film star Stormy Daniels in her legal battles with President Donald Trump, said on Tuesday he would not run for the White House in 2020, ending a months-long flirtation with a bid for the Democratic nomination. Avenatti, who has been a vocal critic of the Republican Trump and has cast himself as having the fighting spirit to take him on, said in a Twitter post he had decided not to seek the presidency after consulting with his family, and "at their request." "But for their concerns, I would run," he added of his family. Avenatti's decision came three weeks after he was arrested in Los Angeles based on allegations of domestic violence, which he has strongly denied. Los Angeles county prosecutors decided against felony charges and referred the matter to city attorneys, who have yet to decide whether lesser charges are warranted. Avenatti did not mention the arrest in his statement, which included his oft-repeated warning that the Democratic Party risked fielding a candidate lacking the killer instinct needed to defeat Trump.

Environmentally friendly federal policies helped clean up one of the most polluted waters in the country.

kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Boston Harbor flounder are now tumor-free thanks to a multibillion-dollar remediation effort, proving that investment from the federal government can positively affect the environment.

But this proof makes the Trump administration's disregard for environmentally friendly policies even more concerning, one biologist said.

Boston Harbor was once the most polluted port in the country.

Boston Harbor flounder now tumor-free after decades of environmental cleanup

In the late 1980s, more than three-quarters of the winter flounder caught in Boston Harbor showed signs of liver disease.

Many of them even had cancerous tumors thanks to all the sewage sludge and toxins dumped in the water.

But now, the flounder and the water they swim in have rebounded. It's a scientific success story, showing the importance of environmentally friendly federal policies, said Michael Moore, a biologist with the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

In a recent paper published in the journal Diseases of Aquatic Organisms, Moore summarized the biggest sign of progress.

"What has changed has been an absence, since 2004, of tumors in Boston Harbor flounder," he said. "The 'why' is important, and the 'why' is that there's been a very substantial implementation of the Clean Water Act."

"The cleanup of Boston Harbor is the greatest environmental achievement of this generation."

Fred Laskey,
MWRA executive director

Since 1986, Moore has been working with the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) to monitor the health impacts of water contaminants on Boston Harbor flounder.

When he first began, there were "a lot of dirty industries" and unregulated practices that caused nitrogenous wastes, petroleum, pesticide chemicals, metals and nitrates to turn the Boston Harbor water toxic.

The flounder were a proxy for that pollution. If he saw the same level of cancerous tumors in humans, Moore said, "it would certainly make me sit up and think an issue is awry."

Now that the Boston

Harbor flounder are tumor-free, it's a sign of a healthier harbor overall.

A 1984 federal district court case mandated that the MWRA improve sewage and runoff handling in the harbor, and it did so through a $3.8 billion project to construct a sewage-treatment plant and a 9.5-mile discharge tunnel.

"In government, you often debate shades of gray," said MWRA Executive Director Fred Laskey in a statement. "But in this case, the empirical data is irrefutable. The cleanup of Boston Harbor is the greatest environmental achievement of this generation."

It was a big effort, but it was worth it, and the proof is in the fish.

"I would not have eaten fish 30 years ago from Boston Harbor," Moore said, "but I would eat them today."

The "Family Guy" alum also enjoys having a spa day every once in a while.

Toward the beginning of "The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel" season two, Susie Myerson (Alex Borstein) gets the opportunity to housesit for Midge's (Rachel Brosnahan) parents while she and her father, Abraham "Abe" Weissman (Tony Shalhoub), trek across the Atlantic to find his wife, Rose (Marin Hinkle). What results is a "Home Alone"-esque montage that looks as fun as it probably was to shoot for the "Family Guy" and "MADtv" alum.

"I enjoy any moment that doesn't have tons and tons of dialogue,"

Alex Borstein thinks the Amazon series is a bit like "The Odd Couple." AMAZON STUDIOS

Borstein tells Metro. "So yeah, getting to lay in the bathtub was a nice break."

Co-created by "Gilmore Girls" showrunners Amy Sherman-Palladino and Dan Palladino, "The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel" is one of the most verbose, witty and fast-paced shows on television today. Every single one of its performers has been tasked at least once with delivering a weighty monologue, or participating in a lengthy dialogue, throughout its first season, and judging by the first five episodes of season two, this hasn't changed one bit.

As much as Borstein's comment may sound like a complaint, it's quite the opposite. The Emmy Award-winning actress has known Sherman-Palladino for years, and since taking the role of Susie, she has come to love the challenge of working on such a complex production.

"It's like boot camp. We work for five to six months and then we get a break from it, so I can't complain," says Borstein. "And there are definitely surprises. Sometimes you go, 'What the hell is Amy thinking.' But there are also some great surprises, too. Like, this season has some musical elements in it that, when I first heard them, I was like, 'What are you talking about?' So there's definitely a lot of that with this show, and it's great."

She also loves getting to spend so much time with Brosnahan, whose Midge is Susie's constant companion. Borstein gets most of her screen time with her fellow Emmy winner, and she adores it.

"I like that Midge and Susie get to explore their relationship on a deeper level this season," she says. "In a way, they're a little bit like a couple in a new relationship, that's finding out all about their annoying habits while being in very close quarters for lengthy periods of time. That's really fun to do. It's a kind of 'Odd Couple' thing that we have going on. That's really fun for me."

Whether Susie will finally get to meet Abe, Rose or anyone else in Midge's family remains to be seen. In fact, Borstein spends so much of her time on set with Brosnahan and some minor characters that she only met some of the show's other featured players recently.

"Halfway through the day, I'm like, 'By the way, my name is Alex,'" she laughs. "There's still a lot of people I haven't worked with yet, so that's kind of fun. It's going to be a fun to finally meet everyone as the show goes on."

"The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel" season two is now on Amazon Prime.

Patriots the best in AFC right now

The Pats jump past the Chiefs in our latest power rankings.

LUKE MILLER
sports@metro.us

1. Los Angeles Rams (12-1) Def. Detroit 30-16. Last Week: 2

The Rams won the NFC West for the second season in a row Sunday, clinching it with their victory over Detroit. Aaron Donald had his third strip sack in two games, giving him 16.5 sacks on the year. But the bigger news than their almost inevitable division title was L.A. regaining home-field advantage and the one seed in the NFC playoff picture. New Orleans' loss to Dallas gave the Rams the one game advantage they need; their only loss this season came at the hands of the Saints.

2. New Orleans Saints (10-2) Lost to Dallas 13-10. Last Week: 1

It was hard to top the shock the nation saw last Thursday night, as the Saints' 10-game win streak came to an end in the least likeliest fashion. They were shut out in the first half and finished with just 10 points and 176 yards of offense. New Orleans' only touchdown came on a 30-yard strike to rookie Keith Kirkwood, his second touchdown on the season and in as many weeks. With Tampa Bay next on the schedule, it's likely this game will be an aberration for the Saints offense — but it might be a costly one.

3. New England Patriots (9-3) Def. Minnesota 24-10. Last Week: 4
He played again this past week, but it almost looked like Rob Gronkowski was back to being absent from the New England offense. Not that they were in desperate need of him against Minnesota. James White had 92 yards receiving, Sony Michel added 63 on the ground, and the Patriots' running backs look as dangerous as ever.

4. Kansas City Chiefs (10-2) Def. Oakland 40-33. Last Week: 3

Kansas City's defense continues to look like a bigger weakness going forward than the departure of star running back Kareem Hunt. Spencer Ware got most of the volume at running back, but Damien Williams was almost as productive. That's something to watch as the season closes. The offense didn't miss a beat. But there are offenses out there (looking at you, Los Angeles Chargers) that will be a lot harder to outscore than the Raiders.

5. Houston Texans (9-3) Def. Cleveland 29-13. Last Week: 5

It took Lamar Miller six games to have a 100-yard effort in 2018. He now has four in the last six. Deshaun Watson threw at least one interception in the first six games of the season. He's been intercepted during just one of the past six games. The Texans have won nine straight and are looking stronger than ever. The Jaguars may have just gift-wrapped the division for Houston with their upset of the Colts.

6. Los Angeles Chargers (9-3) Def. Pittsburgh 33-30. Last Week: 7

The Chargers are turning up the heat on the Chiefs. Even without Melvin Gordon they had enough firepower to jump out of a 23-7 hole. Their long-term kicking issues look like they might be back, but if Los Angeles gets three tries to win every game, who could stop them?

7. Seattle Seahawks (7-5) Def. San Francisco 43-16. Last Week: 10

This offense is humming. That's something that can't be said about their opponents this week on Monday Night Football. They take on the Vikings in a game with huge wild card implications.

8. Chicago Bears (8-4) Lost to NY Giants 30-27 (OT.) Last Week: 6

Trubisky didn't go quite as well. The Bears' five-game win streak came to a halt as Daniel was sacked five times, threw two interceptions, and fumbled four times (though the Bears recovered every one.) Chicago still has plenty of space at the top of the NFC North, but if Mitch Trubisky isn't back in time for this week's matchup with the Rams, things could get ugly.

9. Dallas Cowboys (7-5) Def. New Orleans 13-10. Last Week: 12

After ending the NFL's longest winning streak, the Cowboys are left in the midst of their own four-game streak. Dallas' defense stopped New Orleans on eight of 11 third-down conversion attempts. A win in their rematch with Philadelphia could essentially clinch the division for Dallas.

Aries You need an outlet, but it shouldn't be something that could get you into trouble. As long as you are moderate and associate with reliable people, positive things will unfold.

Taurus Make a physical change that will attract attention. A sophisticated yet bold statement will give you that look of success. Romance is on the rise, and professional goals can be reached.

Gemini You'll have trouble seeing clearly if you let someone sway your opinion. Don't get involved in something you cannot afford or that will lead to loss. Joint ventures should be avoided.

Cancer Take care of business and move on to projects you find more enjoyable. Preparations for functions you plan to attend or for a date night with a loved one look promising.

Leo Take better care of your health. You may be in the mood to cut loose with friends and overdo it, but it won't be worth it. Stick to a healthy lifestyle.

Virgo Don't let your emotions interfere with what's right. Don't take a chance that could cost you emotionally or financially. Avoid unpredictable, disruptive individuals.

Libra Study all the pros and cons before you sign up for something that close friends and family may not like. Get the go-ahead as well as the pertinent details first.

Scorpio Plan a get-together with someone you haven't seen in a long time. Interacting with someone from your past will revive memories and remind you of goals you have yet to accomplish.

Sagittarius Don't leave anything to chance. Clear up unfinished business so you don't have it hanging over your head when you want to kick back and enjoy the festivities.

Capricorn Do what comes naturally and head in whatever direction will bring you the highest returns. Refuse to let anyone use guilt tactics to take advantage of you emotionally or financially.

Aquarius Don't make a change because someone has fed you false information or is pressuring you. Know who and what you are up against before you make a decision.

Pisces You can accomplish plenty if you do things for yourself. Don't let anyone lead you astray or take advantage of you. Use your intelligence and intuition to outsmart perpetrators. EUGENIA LAST
